

- Friday; 1:45 - 3pm
- Event title (Up to 80 characters with spaces): Women Exploring Wild Spaces
- Event description (Up to 500 characters with spaces): Wild spaces have historically been a male dominated arena. More than ever, women are exploring remote places and finding voice in the evolving conversation of sustainability. From international trekking or exploring the natural beauty of your own backyard through words and art to translating rural life in Maine from a queer perspective or finding the power rooted in the physical landscape, these women record their experiences to make sense of our human place in the earth's past, present, and future.
- Event organizer (who should be listed as the main user in our system): Trinity University Press and Terrain.org
